WHOLE NATION WILL OBSERVE DEFENSE TEST

War Department And General Staff On War Footing

WASHINGTON, July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Beginning at daylight tomorrow America once more, theoretically, will be mustering for war. The occasion will be the second test of national defense plans.

The war department and general staff were already on assimilated war footing tonight. Headed by Major General John L. Hines, chief of staff, and with General Pershing standing by to observe results of the nine months work on muster plans since the first test September 12, the whole military establishment in Washington was on duty and in immediate communication with the nine corps area commanders on which chief responsibility for the test devolves.

May Be Disappointing
That the results may be disappointing, so far as the number of one-day volunteers assembled to muster to fill up skeleton reserve units, national guard regiments, and the regulars to war strength is concerned, was admitted by many officers.

Last September approximately 1,500,000 men turned out, or nearly 300,000 more than would be needed in the first four months of an actual war mobilization. Officials have every reason to believe however, that the July 4 test will bring out facts of utmost value since the next step before the department is the establishment, probably by law, of a permanent system for testing muster machinery.

As far as the patriotic demonstrations tomorrow are concerned, it is possible that the aggregate number of Americans gathered will exceed the 16 or more millions who shared in a similar way in the test last September since the test is coincident with celebrations of Independence Day.

Two handicaps marked the preparations for the test tomorrow. They were the brief period allowed after President Coolidge's disappearance the November 11 date originally recommended and the fact that the Fourth of July, which is a national holiday, part of a two-day weekend. Both of these conditions, entered into reasons given by numerous governors for declining to take as active as part in the test as their states did last September.

The state restrictions for the most part, however, related only to national guard participation in the test.

From all the states where governors found it impossible to give full cooperation, the war department has received advice that patriotic organizations such as the American Legion and other veterans associations are making a greater effort to stimulate participation by their communities than in the first test.

Chicago "All Set"
CHICAGO, July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Chicago and the entire Sixth Corps Army area was "set" tonight for defense test day tomorrow when there will be a mobilization throughout the district of reserve military forces, active troops units, and civilians whose services are required by the government in time of war.

In the sixth corps area comprising the states of Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois, men and officers of the 86th reserve infantry division and the 65th cavalry division will report for roll call as well as members of the 33rd division of the national guard. A number of regiments later will participate in community celebrations.

HAIR BOB CAUSES
STRIKE OF BARBERS
Princeton, Ind., July 3.—Because J. F. Morgan, proprietor of a Princeton barber shop bobbed his daughter's hair outside of union hours, twelve Princeton barbers today walked out of the shops in which they are employed.

The union charged that Morgan also intruded on an open union meeting when he came to his shop at 8 p. m., last week, two hours after the union closing hour, to cut his daughter's tresses. Morgan said the union held a meeting in his shop without notifying him.

GREEN BOXING BILL BECOMES LAW WHEN SMALL FAILS TO ACT

Carries Referendum Clause —Three Commissioners In Charge

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 3. (By Associated Press.)—The Illinois boxing bill, permitting ten round decision bouts, if municipalities favor contests by referendum vote, became a law at midnight tonight without the signature of Governor Small. The bill, introduced in the house of representatives by Representative Lee Roy Green, Rockford, legalizes boxing for the first time in state history, but the safeguard is the referendum clause which was inserted to prevent a threatened veto.

The measure known as House Bill 338, has been in the possession of Governor Small for ten days. The governor left Springfield at noon today for Kankakee to remain for a week or ten days. Before his departure he took no action, and when the time limit expired at midnight the measure became a law without his signature.

Companion bills, making appropriations for the expense of the state athletic commission will also become laws without executive approval.

United effort on the part of house and senate members from Chicago and the downstate brought about passage of the bill. A measure legalizing boxing, but without a referendum clause was vetoed by former Governor Lowden.

Under the Green bill Governor Small is empowered to appoint three members, who shall have supervision of boxing and wrestling contests in the state. The commission cannot issue permits for contests until municipalities have approved the proposition by referendum vote.

The commissioners will serve at a salary of $4,500 a year.

JUDGE JONES ORDERS STATE TO CONSTRUCT ROAD THRU VIRGINIA

Must Follow Out Act Of 1917 And Go Thru Business Part

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Attempts of the state highway division to change the route of the proposed hard road from Springfield to Beardstown thru Virginia were stopped by an order of Circuit Judge Jones here today, in which he decided that the state has no authority to make "major" changes in routes prescribed under the $60,000,000 hard road system.

Under the act of 1917, it was provided that a hard road should go thru the business district of Virginia. Director Miller of the Department of Public Works, after a conference with Governor Small, decided that a road thru the middle of the town was unnecessary, and that a road at the edge of town would do.

Five Virginia men filed a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel construction of the road as the law proposed, and today they were granted the writ. Judge Jones said the law provides specifically that the road must be constructed thru the towns and cities designated without other than "minor" changes. The change attempted at Virginia he said was not a "minor" change.

The second provides for revision of Chinese customs duties in order to bring about increased revenue for the Chinese government.

VENIR FAILS IN PRODUCING FOUR JURYMEN

Looney Does His Own Questioning — Has Tilt With Barbour

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Efforts to complete a jury to try John P. Looney, alleged former vice-dictator in Rock Island, on charges of conspiracy to protect gambling, failed today when the second special venire to be called in the trial was exhausted and court adjourned until Monday morning with eight men in the box.

Twenty new talesmen will be summoned for duty Monday morning. Panels were completed and tendered by both sides during the examination of prospective jurors today but in every case the panel was broken for cause under cross-examination.

Looney, who was formerly a lawyer, but who was disbarred several years ago, assumed charge of his own case today and questioned a number of talesmen. Under the law every defendant has the right to conduct his own case if he so chooses. Looney carried prospective jurors back over two decades in his efforts to uncover any relationship or incident that might tend to influence a juror against him.

Close Questioning
His questions touched on the religious, political and fraternal lives of the talesmen. Long lists of probable witnesses, city officials, club officials, county officials and business men were read to the talesmen to uncover any possible acquaintance that might have an influence on the verdict. He was opposed repeatedly by objections from Senator James J. Barbour, special assistant state's attorney who forced him to rephrase many of his questions.

Among the questions propounded by Looney were:
"Did you ever hear John Looney referred to as a murderer or as legal counsel for the underworld?"

An attempt to question veniremen as to reports they might have heard of possible delinquencies made before the Rock Island Club by Senator Barbour, failed when Barbour denied that he had made any addresses.

"I have slept there, but I have never made an address," Senator Barbour told Judge N. A. Larson.

"The court doesn't care for any addresses made in your sleep," the judge ruled.

"Your Honor, that is exactly what Mrs. Barbour says," the senator replied.

It was the only smile afforded by the hottest day of the trial. One hundred veniremen have been examined and only eight jurors have been obtained.

GIRL CHANGES HER MIND ABOUT SHIEKS

NEW YORK, July 3. (AP)—Her back still bearing the marks left by a horse whip in the hands of an Arab Shiek, Miss Gizzella Wattenberg returned today on the United States liner George Washington with an entirely different conception of the desert Bedouin than that she had previously found in fiction.

Miss Wattenberg joined a party of 12 on April 7, on their way to Nabulus to observe the ancient Jewish custom of animal sacrifice.

The party was slowly proceeding over the mountainous trail when a band of horsemen swept down, circled them twice and began to throw stones. Miss Wattenberg said. They beat the guide over the shoulders and then the leader of the band brought his whip down several times across Miss Wattenberg's back.

A party of Americans then appeared on the scene and frightened them away.

This interesting note in the handwriting of Martha Washington has just been brought to light by Edward S. Leadbeater of Alexandria, Va., who found it in an obscure corner of his drug store. His store was originally owned by one Stabler, to whom Mrs. Washington wrote this note in 1802, just a month before her death.

Heat Prostrations Numerous In State

CHICAGO, July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Temperatures throughout the midwest started a meteoric rise today that for a time gave promise of a sizzling Independence Day tomorrow, but weather forecasts tonight indicated cooler weather for the Fourth, following thundershowers tonight.

Tomorrow throughout most of the district for which forecasts are made here, will be fair and cooler with fresh shifting winds. In Chicago the mercury climbed from 77 at noon to 96 at 4 o'clock, almost a record for the season while in Milwaukee thermometers jumped thirteen degrees in ten minutes to 93 at 3 o'clock. Springfield, Ill., reported 102, the hottest of the year with one prostration while Peoria reported three prostrations yesterday and a temperature of 100 and Canton, Ill., had five prostrations. Extreme heat prevailed today over the entire middle west but a cool wave from the northwest promised to bring relief in a few hours from the heat crowding over the middle states from the Mississippi Valley.

Indiana's heat wave was broken by severe thundershowers late today, in some cases driving people to their cellars and doing considerable damage to property in the vicinity of New Castle, Omaha, Neb., also reported rain with a lowering of temperatures while in Iowa the mercury started to tumble in a cool breeze and a rain visited the southern part of the state. Several prostrations were reported at Des Moines. Light rains in Kansas lowered temperatures and cooler weather was promised for tomorrow for this state.

All heat records for the year were broken in Chicago today when the mercury mounted to 98 degrees at 5:30 o'clock. The previous high mark for the year was 96 degrees.

BROKERS FIRM OF NEW YORK GOES TO WALL

Unable To Meet Loan Suspended From All Exchanges

NEW YORK, July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Encumbered by slow moving assets the New York Stock Exchange brokerage firm of Dean, Onativia & Co. was thrown into bankruptcy today with liabilities estimated at approximately $35,000,000 and assets at $20,000,000 or more. While the amount of money involved is the largest of any stock exchange failure in recent years, counsel for the firm declared that the actual loss would be small and that creditors and customers were well protected.

Large holdings of grain company stocks which were not readily marketable and which tied up the firm's working capital, were among the main factors in its inability to meet its obligations.

The bulk of these investments was said to be in the Rosenbaum Grain corporation, controlled by two of the firm's partners, E. F. and E. S. Rosenbaum.

Transacting a huge business in both stocks and grain, the company maintained large offices in New York and Chicago and branch offices in Washington and Plainfield, N. J. Upon announcing its failure to meet its obligations following the calling of a loan by a Chicago bank, the firm was immediately suspended by the New York stock exchange, the Chicago stock exchange and Chicago board of trade, the New York curb market and the New York cotton exchange.

William M. Cannon, was appointed receiver for the company in New York after three employees had filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court. The application estimated the firm's liabilities at $35,000,000 and its assets at $20,000,000.

Market Is Hurt
Failure of the firm temporarily unsettled the stock market and caused forced liquidation of some of its stock holdings.

There included shares of the Stewart Warner Speedometer company, the Chicago Yellow Cab company and other so-called Chicago stocks such as Sears Roebuck and Pullman. The new curb market suspended today's stocks of the Rosenbaum Grain corporation and the American Rayon products corporations in which the house was interested.

Irving L. Ernst, representing the attorneys for the creditors said that a committee of creditors

PRESIDENT IS MAIN SPEAKER AT CAMBRIDGE

Washington Took the Command Of Army 150 Years Ago

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 3. (By Associated Press.)—Near the spot where George Washington took command of the continental army, President Coolidge called on the nations of Europe today to enter into mutual covenants for their mutual security, pledging the moral support of the American government if they do so.

"While our own country should refrain from making political commitments where it does not have political interests," he declared, "such covenants would always have the moral support of our government and could not fail to have the commendation of the public opinion of the world."

"Such a course would be sure to endow the participating nations with an abundant material and spiritual reward. On what other basis can there be any encouragement for a disposition to attempt to finance a revival of Europe?"

The president made brief but general reference to the European situation in an address discussed on historic Cambridge Common. His speech was the nature of the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the day Washington assumed command of the Continental troops under the famed elm which formerly stood a stone's throw from the speaker's stand.

The president, accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, motored from Swampscott to take part in the fête, heading a parade and reviewing it before delivering his speech.

"Completion, Not Conflict"
After tracing Washington's achievements and praising his character and services, Mr. Coolidge, asserted that the nation's first president had demonstrated by his arguments and our country has demonstrated by experience, that more progress can be made by competition than by conflict.

"To agree quickly with your adversary always pays," he added, continuing:
"I want to see America assume a leadership among nations and the reliance upon the good faith of mankind. I do not see how civilization can expect permanent progress on any other theory."

"If the people of the old world are mutually distrustful of each other let them enter into mutual covenants for their mutual security, and when such covenants have been made let them be solemnly observed, no matter what the sacrifice."

"They have settled the far more difficult problems of reparations, they are in process of funding their debts to us, why can they not agree on permanent terms of peace and fully reestablished international faith and credit?"

"Arbitration Best"
"If there be differences which cannot be adjusted at the moment, if there be conditions which cannot be foreseen let them be resolved in the future, by methods of arbitration and by the methods of judicial determination."

"The world has tried war with force and has utterly failed. The only hope of success lies in peace with justice no other principle conforms to the teaching of Washington. No other standard is worthy of the spirit of America; no other course makes so much promise for the regeneration of the world."

ROCKFORD DAMAGED AND ONE MAN HURT DURING HEAVY WIND

Storm Heralded By Lightning Bolt That Strikes Store

ROCKFORD, Ill., July 3. (By Associated Press.)—A severe wind and electrical storm which struck Rockford early this evening resulted in considerable property damage and injury to several persons struck by flying debris. LeRoy Knope, 35, who was injured beneath ruins of a brick wall at the Barnes Drill company, was blown in by the wind, may not recover.

The storm came with little warning after a sultry afternoon. It was heralded by a huge lightning bolt which struck the clothing store of D. Turkenkopf in the center of the business section. A large chimney hit by the bolt crashed thru the roof of the building, carried away the ceiling and the clothing store and showered more than a ton of brick into the center of a group of shoppers. Several persons were seriously injured although one woman was removed from the store in a hysterical condition.

Scores of great elms for which the city is famous were destroyed. In many cases the trees in their fallen damaged automobile, parked at the curb and buildings. Power, telephone and street car companies reported extensive damage to wire lines. Windows were blown in at several stores and displays ruined by sheets of rain and hail which accompanied the wind.

The storm, which was limited in its scope, passed in a few minutes. It was followed later in the evening by another severe rain and thunderstorm, but little damage from the second storm except to buildings unroofed by the first storm was reported.

DAYTON, TENN. NOT TO HEAR SCOPES TRIAL

Darrow Announces Case Will Go Into Federal Court

CHICAGO, July 3. (AP)—An announcement today of a sudden shift in the plans of the defense brought about the possibility that John T. Scopes, principal in the case to test Tennessee's anti-evolution law, may never face trial in Dayton, where his case is due to begin next Friday.

Under the new plan announced today by Clarence Darrow, associate counsel for Scopes, the case will be carried directly to the federal courts, either at Knoxville or Chattanooga. The proceedings seeking to restrain enforcement of the law by the Tennessee authorities. This action would bring the constitutionality of the Tennessee statute directly to issue in the federal courts where it is agreed by all parties, the ultimate adjudication of the question must be made.

Data for Injunction.
Dr. John R. Neal, of Knoxville senior counsel for the young school teacher already is in Tennessee with data for the defense application for the injunction. Petitions will be filed Monday or Tuesday of next week in court to be selected by Darrow.

Should the defense secure federal injunction the Dayton trial would be blocked pending an appeal of the prosecution to higher court. And should the United States Supreme court sustain such an injunction on the ground that the Tennessee law is in compliance with the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and religion, the state would be powerless to move against Scopes in any legal action.

The hope of shunting the sensational and dramatic potentialities of the Dayton trial was a major consideration in the deliberations of the defense attorneys which resulted in the unexpected shift of the scene. Of equal weight was the promise of shorter route to the supreme court.

Dayton Perturbed
While citizens of Dayton were obviously perturbed by the new reports that the community might be deprived of the trial for so long and that the defense attorneys for the prosecution rather scouted the idea that anything serious would result of Mr. Darrow's announcement.

"In my opinion," said Herbert E. Eckes, one of the prosecution counsel, "the rumor is another part of the advertising program the defense has been carrying. In this case, the rumor is as absurd as the suggestion to change the case out of federal jurisdiction and which it naturally falls.

And in spite of the defense strategy, the authorities at Dayton indicated tonight that plans for the trial will be executed on the original schedule. At a regular session of the Rhea county circuit court next Monday, fifty veniremen from whom the Scopes jury could be selected in the ordinary course of events will be chosen from the county roll.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America.

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

Independence concludes with this sentence: "And for the support of this Declaration with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

It is well to remember that the founders of the republic were men of strong religious convictions; that they had faith in God, and that they put "a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence."

W. D. Hopper is a firm that never goes out of business and once in awhile it publishes a catalog. Tom Masson's annual is it. The reader is advised to pick up this book whenever he feels gloomy or down in the mouth, read a few skits and lay it aside. It is not a book with which one would want to spend hours, but only moments now and then.

In this book the editor has contrived to collect the best of the world's humor for 1924. Doubtless he missed something, for this is an age when no magazine is complete without an amusement department of some kind. News-paper columns are legion, and many writers make a business of syndicated bright sayings, jokes and humorous verse.

We have in this book the hundred best American and the hundred best British epigrams for the year, all of them more or less clever, but some of course better than others. We find the British more witty than they are reputed, and some of the Americans showing a tendency to overwork in the production of bright ideas. Each of the leading cities has its few pages of humor taken from its leading publications. There are many longer stories in light vein, several clever poems, and no end of good jokes.

We were to criticize the book in any particular, it would be in the author's inclusion of a certain brand of what we may term exaggerated humor. In our opinion it does not take much talent to write this type of stuff, most of which is rather misleading. Referring to a particular story, we may say that young men in college do not usually drink all corners of liquor, nor do they meet girls in a public place for a petting party. If they drink liquor, they do not brag about it, and they usually do their petting private.

A type of humor that jokes about the more or less questionable doings of people is itself not true to art. It gives the wrong idea and tends to cause readers to have a less regard for the fundamental morality of the race. Aside from what we have said, we have no further criticism to offer, and if the reader of Tom Masson's annual will recognize the type of stuff against which this warning is given and taken to for what it is worth, which is practically nothing, he may browse in the book with a clear conscience and enjoy himself without restriction.

Gas and Smoke

GAS: A Play. By George Kaiser. (Translated from the German by Hermann Schaffner.) Small Maynard & Co. 1924.

Reviewed by
GEORGE KEARNS

In a brief explanatory note, evidently by the publishers, we are told, "Kaiser seeks to portray not the flight of a single individual from the consequences of his deed, but the universal flight of a nameless society from its nameless fears."

In "GAS" the millionaire's son is director and trustee of a great co-operative factory for the production of a new gas that shall serve every purpose of industry. Upon this gas all social and political hopes are based; it is the symbol of the director's ideals and the workman's ambition. The gas explodes and leaves the factory in ruins. To rebuild or not to rebuild now becomes the question.

Many plays are said to play better than they read and we believe this to be one of them, providing the presenting company is of ability. The cast is long, and seemingly minor parts make demands on the ability of the players, while the leading parts call for talent of the highest class.

The author, or translator, indicates great broken speech, abrupt closing or beginnings of a line, a style that is American stage parlance would be called "choppy," and yet, read with intelligence, understandable. Somewhat devoid of humor, each reader or auditor would no doubt draw his own conclusion as to the purpose of "GAS," the onward sweep of power and rain to the detriment of beauty and self.

Many times stand out impressively, as in the third act when the Billionaire's Son seeks to help the Officer. "The great stronghold of error cannot be toppled over by one man alone." And after his hopeless endeavors to convince other Employers to his high plane of endeavor, "The world is out of joint, let others force it back again." And at the end, seemingly defeated, sought out alone by his widowed daughter who is to bring him a ray of hope, he tells her in reply to her question, "Yes, I am alone at last, like all men who wish to give themselves to all men."

The book gives complete directions for stage sets and lighting effects which should prove very effective and striking, and able to command the services of a large cast and interested in the German drama will no doubt find "GAS" worthy of production.

A WELCOME GUEST

A swaying clump of nut-brown weeds;
Stalks bending over with ripen'd seeds;
A stir! a flash! 'Tis a cardinal's crest,
Then a teetering gleam of the gay little guest;
And a glancing flame under skies so gray,
When he wings his flight in the fading day.
My heart is light and there's naught to fear,
Where a red-bird flits and calls "What Cheer?"

—Cora M. Hueston.

SAY AND HEARSAY

"Why is an Anthology?" It is a question often asked, only to be answered by the publication of another anthology. People buy them, if they do not read them, for my part, they are good to dip into. You can do it any time, if the anthology is yours on the shortest notice, open the book at random, read a little, and then go about your business. The exercise to your mind is like a tonic, and the nap after lunch. It refreshes the soul, as the nap refreshes the nerves, and wards off newspaper stagnation.

Derived from the Greek, the word anthology means "Flower-gathering," and was first applied to collections of verse culled from different poets, but now it has been extended to collections of various sorts of prose as well.

In 1918, McClurg issued a sort of key (by Edith Granger) to the numerous anthologies of poetry, in which were included nearly two volumes, with title index, author index, and first line index.

Anthologies might well be classified as: Encyclopedic, Biographical, Critical, Annual, Children's, and Miscellaneous. The three older encyclopedic anthologies are: Dana's "The Household Book of Poetry," (Appleton, 1857), Bryant's "A New Library of Poetry and Prose," (Doubleday), and Coates' "The Fireside Encyclopedia of Poetry," (Winston).

The popular edition of the last is known as the "Golden Treasury of Poetry and Song," but is not to be confused with "The Golden Treasury of Songs and Lyrics," (Macmillan).

The first series of the Macmillan publication was issued in 1861, and the second in 1897. The Bookman's Manual says of this:

"The Golden Treasury is the most famous anthology in the English language. It is also the choicest anthology because the most extensive. The first series claimed to be a selection of the best short lyrics, and none but the best, by writers not then living. The second series was extended to include living poets."

However, for comprehensive-ness, and for the inclusion of the longer narrative poems, the three named above are superior. The only later book to be compared with them is "The Home Book of Verse" of some 4,000 pages (Holt, 1912, with revised and enlarged edition in 1922).

Next in point of interest are the old volumes of miscellaneous writings called "yearbooks," issued in pamphlet form to be bound later, containing verse, legends, curious lore, antiquities and anecdotes. Such were Brand's "Popular Antiquities," Hone's "Every-day Book," Brewer's "The Reader's Handbook," and Chamber's "Book of Days," most of them re-issued in several later editions.

Nearly every writer of verse or prose has at one time or another contemplated getting out an anthology. The fever of anthology making is almost as fatal as that of original composition. As to just what an anthology should be, no two people are agreed. And so instead of trying nowadays to get out a book that will please everybody, the editor takes a new tack—he gets out an anthology that pleases himself, and trusts that the public will have enough confidence (or curiosity) to look in.

Such a book is the recent "Anthology of Pure Poetry" by George Moore (Boni & Liveright) which contains, the compiler states, only "pure poetry, something that the poet creates outside of his own personality." The supposed value of the anthology is in that it creates a new standard. But the standard and the definition are rather vague, and it takes an introduction to explain why one poem is taken and another discarded.

How is it nowadays I can not say, but it used to be that the compiling of homemade anthologies was a popular diversion. "Scrap-books" they were called, then, and I would not be surprised to hear that many of the older families still treasure one or more of those old scrap-books of their ancestors, containing all the press notices of births and weddings and deaths, as well as clippings of verse and prose of the day.

The scrap-book was a sort of household library in its time, when newspapers and magazines were rarer—and better—than they are now, and before the advent of the rural mail. The scrap-book and the family photograph album flourished together. But when the album occupied a favored place on the parlor table, to be seen and handled by everybody coming in, the scrap-book had to be content with reposing in some half-secret drawer, and seldom came forth except to be stuffed with new material, or to settle an argument in the family.

I recall one in particular, made out of a geography of the world—a world of literature now, stiff with home-made paste, and bulging with miscellaneous print. Some of the poems were trivial, or sentimental, beyond endurance, my endurance, that is, the they must have appealed to the one who was so careful to preserve them.

There is something personal about our scrap-books, as much as our love-letters, in that we seldom mention them to others, and even made a little uncomfortable if someone happens to get hold of one and makes free with its contents. Yet it should be the other way. We ought to share our treasures willingly, and—would anything be more delightful—and unique—than a circle of scrap-book fans reading aloud in turn from the collections they had made?

A series of such anthologies compiled by the same hand throughout the years might show considerable progress on the part of the compiler in mental and sentimental development. Often I wish that I had some of the scrap-books I made, or started, in my earlier years.

Of course, it takes time and patience to build a scrap-book, and this age is too busy with other amusements. And literature of all sorts is so common nowadays. However, I do happen to know of some "collections," which Mason and Edith Guest, who have never lost a step, which are too comprehensive to be anything but dull and intolerable reading.

THE SINS OF SAINT ANTHONY.
By Charles Collins. Pascal Coviel. 1925.

Reviewed by
WAYNE GARD

There should be seven reviews for each tale deserves separate treatment. But as it would take nearly as long to read an adequate criticism as to go through the stories themselves, the best advice that can be given is to read the book.

As dramatic critic of the Chicago Evening Post, Charles Collins learned the theater inside and out. In this book he keeps close to his field, for six of the seven stories have to do with theater people.

Without illusion and without sentimentality, Mr. Collins cuts through the maze of stereotypes that surround the stage, and presents actors and managers as human beings. Having no axe to grind, he devotes himself to art, and achieves an amusing lightness, often suggestive of Leonard Merrick.

"One of Our Daughters" gives a cynical picture of the stage-struck flapper who becomes "the kid with the complex" and is saved eventually by going back home and marrying a tomato canner. "When Marcia Fell" traces the adventures of a romantic clubman who wanted to marry a stage star. "The Sins of Saint Anthony," with a North Shore setting, shows that more than halitosis enters into the complexity of sex charm.

The nature of some of the stories can be surmised by their endings. Curiosity about Iris and her affairs is aroused by learning that "the next season she played a magnificent Lady Macbeth." And we want to know more about "that girl on the end" who kissed him gaily and said with a laugh, "Good-by, honey. I loved you—but the season closed."

The Saturday Evening Post and similar periodicals have published six of these stories. The tale that opens the book is the only one that has not appeared in print before. Possibly if we may be mean enough to suggest it—this is explained by its being longer, more artificial, and not quite up to the standard of those that follow. But all seven are highly satisfying, and make an appropriate book for vacation reading.

Many Ghosts

THE GHOST OF GLEN GORGE.
By Grace Miller White. Macaulay Co. New York. $2.00.

Reviewed by
W. ALBERT HICKOX

It should be sufficient to say that this is another novel of squatter life by the author of "Tess of the Storm Country," and that the setting and some of the characters make their re-appearance in "The Ghost of Glen Gorge." But for those who have missed the pleasure of reading "Tess," a few details of the latest novel by Mrs. White will be mentioned. The quaint, lovable red-headed Peg Peg equals, if not surpasses, the delightful Tess in her ability to charm the reader.

The story is interesting in that it contains not one but several ghosts and a phantom mermaid who weigh heavily not only on the superstitious minds of the illiterate squatter-folk of the Silent City, but also upon those of Philander Johnson and his lawyer, Peewee.

Besides all these apparitions, there is a miracle of faith by which the young son of Bill Mumps is cured of permanent lameness and probably saved from death thru the unflinching faith of harum-scarum Peg.

The story opens with Peg and her grandmother, who is mayor of the Silent City, expelling Wolf Butts, Butterfish Bishop and Flint Huttman neither to kill nor allow any other squatter to kill Philander Johnson, who is trying to drive the squatters from the Silent City. The narrative proceeds thru trial and hardship, in which Johnson steals from Miss Lucina Wiley, a friend of the squatters, the deed and a claim which entitle her to the land on which the Silent City stands. Butterfish Bishop tries to force his affections upon Peg, but is warned off by "his grand-pappy's ghost." Lib Doolittle, Peg's grandmother, is forced to leave the Silent City to evade the law which has been enacted by Johnson and Peewee.

This leaves Peg the mayor of the settlement, much to the disapproval of most of the men. She has quite a difficult task in retaining her position, and is enabled to keep it only by the appearance of the ghost. The appearance of the phantom mermaid prevents Wolf Butts, Peg's friend and adviser, from leaving her in the lurch. The story moves on rapidly. Peg retrieves Miss Wiley's stolen papers, and thus prevents the destruction of the Silent City. Miss Wiley marries Ben Burr, the editor of the newspaper. Johnson admits his defeat, Peg becomes engaged to Peter Johnson, old Philander's son, and the mystery of the ghost is satisfactorily explained.

Altogether, it is a very pleasing story, and despite its superabundance of "spooks" is well worth reading.

Menus for a Family

Breakfast — Sliced pineapple, broiled bacon, potatoes hashed in milk, crisp whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Macaroni baked with tomatoes and cheese lettuce salad, jellied gooseberries, oatmeal cookies, brown bread, milk, ice tea.

Dinner — Iced bouillon, lamb loaf, creamed potatoes, new peas and carrots in butter, salad of Swiss chard, strawberry blanc-mange, sponge cake, graham bread, milk, coffee.

Any preferred brand of bouillon cubes or canned soup can be used to make iced bouillon. The bouillon must be well seasoned and extra strong. Dehydrated gelatine is added in the proportion of 1 tablespoon granulated to three cups of soup. This makes a smooth delicate jelly, not too stiff. It must be served very cold.

Strawberry Blanc-mange

One quart strawberries, one cup cream, 1 cup sugar, few grains salt, three tablespoons cornstarch.

Wash and remove hulls from berries. Rub through a sieve fine enough to remove seeds. Put juice into a smooth sauce pan and bring to the boiling point. Add cream and sugar and bring again to the boiling point. Stir cornstarch with enough old milk to make a smooth paste that will pour easily. Stir this into boiling strawberry mixture. Place immediately over hot water and cook, stirring frequently for 15 minutes. Turn into molds and chill before serving.

If the berries are tart more than a cup of sugar will be needed. (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service).

Three-Quarter Mile Record Again Falls

CLEVELAND, O., July 3. (By Associated Press)—The racing of Anna Bradford's Girl and the lowering of the world's record for trotters at three-quarters of a mile for the second time in two days featured today's Grand Circuit program at North Randall. Anna Bradford's Girl driven by W. K. Dickerson paced the fastest mile of the year when she won the Times, value $3,000 for 2.06 paces from a good field, including Theodore Guy, which went thru last season without a defeat. The mare stepped the first mile in 2:02 3-5, the second in 2:03 1-5 and the third in 2:03 2-5.

It was in the second that she showed her gameness. After leading for half a mile Anna Bradford's Girl went into a break and came from back to win easily.

Anna Bradford's Girl was sired by the Northern Man which also sired Northern King, the maker of the new world record today. In stepping three-fourths of a mile in 1:32 2-5 in the 2:14 trot, Northern King clipped three-fifths off the mark established yesterday by Woodrow L. The first quarter was trotted in 31 seconds and the half in 1:01 3-5.

Northern King then trotted a mile and an eighth in 2:21 4-5 to capture the second heat and the race. He was driven by Doc Vail. Dr. Strong Worthy, for which Thomas Murphy was reputed to have paid $25,000 last winter, was never prominent in the first two heats, but had little difficulty taking the third.

The 2:18 trot went to Van Todd. Quilberry captured the first heat but found the distance in the other two heats too long.

The summaries:

2:14 class trot. Purses $1,200; The Times, value $3,000 for 2.06 paces from a good field, including Theodore Guy, which went thru last season without a defeat. The mare stepped the first mile in 2:02 3-5, the second in 2:03 1-5 and the third in 2:03 2-5.

2:06 class pace—The Times, value $3,000, mile heats. Anna Bradford's Girl, br. m., by The Northern Man, Anna Bradford, won; Pete Green, second; Robert Direct, third; Phil O'Neill, fourth. Theodore Guy, War Bride, Kid Hal, El Verso and Miss Belwin also started. Time 2:02 3-5; 2:03 1-5, 2:03 2-5.

2:18 class trot—Purses, $1,200; 3-4, 1-1-8, 1-1-4 mile heats. Van Todd, gr. c., by Jim Todd, Vanity Oro, won; Quilberry, second; Major Riser, third; Princess Bell, fourth; Lady Mae, Czarina Worthy, Hallie Harvester, Fred M. Southward, Mabel Axworthy, Lu Menta, Lee Winder and Donald A. also started. Time 1:32 2-5; 2:22 2-5; 2:21 1-5.

COVELESKIE WINS HIS TENTH

BOSTON, July 3. (AP)—Stanley Coveleskie hung up his tenth victory of the season today when the Washington Senators overcame the Boston Red Sox 11 to 0. The Red Sox were only able to hit safely four times which the league leaders were slugging. Zahniser, menlessly, McNeely knocked out two runs over the left field fence and Harris duplicated this feat once. The combination play of Beckinbaugh and S. Harris was a big factor in four Washington double plays.

Score: Washington 400 020 131-11 21 1 Boston 000 000 000-0 4 6 Coveleskie and Ruel; Zahniser, Joss and Plimlich.

Wimbledon, July 3. (AP)—Today the all-English tennis tournament brought forth the expected and the unexpected. Suzanne Lenglen, the French marvel did what had been expected when she captured the women's singles for the sixth time since 1919 by defeating the young English girl, Joan Fry, 6-2, 6-0.

Ventilated Helmets And Caps
Can you conjure up the West Point cadet without his familiar shako, that quaint, square-set, tallish hat with its cavalier peak and gresadier plume? It is almost as hard to picture the English polo player without his helmet of cork or pith. Once reminiscent of the turban and shaded expanse of Singapore or of the Indian Durbar, the helmet to-day is rapidly gaining vogue for many sports, including golf and horseback, though not for tennis to which it is totally unsuited, as it is prone to obstruct the player's vision. The sporting helmet has a sleekly dashing picturesqueness about it which puts all other field hats, as well as the wearer, in the shade. It may be sheathed with cool white linen, duck, khaki or even pongee silk. There are airholes in the crown or it has the ventilating sweatband. The underbrim is faced with green cotton to lessen sunblik.

Pith helmets are lighter than cork, weighing, about six ounces. However, they are prone to turn bilgy, as sailors say, in wet weather. Cork helmets which weigh around nine ounces are not affected by dampness. To be sure the sporting helmet will never be a style adopted by most of us. It is rather for the odd man who fancies a picturesque touch to his mode of dress whether afield or a-mout.

Besides the heavier, true-to-type helmets of cork or pith, recalling Stanley in Darkest Africa, there are the lighter ones of Madagascar straw and raffia palm. These while, not genuine helmets, are made like them and many golfers are wearing them for their individual appearance and undoubted smartness. The helmet can no longer be looked down upon, or rather up to, as a style of the favored few alone, because to-day popularity is treading upon the very heels of exclusiveness.

If the helmet is too toplofty for your taste, you may select any of many styles in ventilated caps, one of which is reproduced here. The perforations between crown and visor permit a cooling current of air to circulate. Whether or not this matter of ventilation is of consequence or not is a matter to be decided for one's self. Certainly, no hat or cap is any less cool and smart because of this feature and it may appeal to the man who wants to preserve his thinning thatch in which every hair counts and can be counted.

One day after he joined the club, Severid, by a pinch-hit, helped tie up a game with Cleveland, Washington winning in extra innings. The power of the base hit is supreme in baseball.

Nats Better Team	Without a doubt the Washington club of this year is a better balanced aggregation than the team that won the American League pennant and the world championship last season.

Washington was sadly lacking in reserve strength last year. If certain star players had been injured in mid-season the club would have been hard pressed to fill the vacancies.

Unquestionably Manager Harris will shortly be forced to rebuild his ball club, since most of it is composed of veteran timber, but for the present it is a tough combination to beat.

NEW YORK, July 3. (By The Associated Press.)—A wave of pre-holiday profit-taking and forced liquidation in connection with the failure of a large stock exchange house engulfed today's stock market turning the trend of prices downward. Despite the market's unsettlement, constructive operations continued in a number of popular specialties, fitting them to new high prices for the year.

Operators for the rise, however, found encouragement in the absorption of selling in the general run of stocks and the success of some of the most aggressive pools in bidding up the favorably viewed, but more than 76 points above the last previous sale, recorded seven months ago.

ROTARY HEARS ABOUT CLEVELAND MEET

Glimpse of the International Convention Given at Luncheon of Home Club Friday.

Charles T. Mackness and Earl M. Spink at the Friday luncheon of the Rotary club gave brief stories of the program presented at the recent international convention held in Cleveland. Their reports gave an idea both of the growth of the organization and the interest which surrounded the Cleveland convention.

Before yesterday's program James Guyette led in mass singing. Mr. Mackness was the first speaker and told of a pageant presented one night which purposed to represent the development of the world from creation leading up to the principles for which Rotary today stands.

Mr. Mackness said that to see thousands of men of the type assembled at Cleveland and to know that they had no selfish motives but wished only to see the growth of Rotary principles in all the relations of life was an inspiration in itself. Then he went on to lay stress upon some of the Rotary principles which

HEALTH OFFICER OFF FOR SOUTHERN HOME

Dr. Mann to Spend Month's Vacation at North Carolina Home—His Work for State

Dr. T. A. Mann, who recently resigned the office of city and county health officer left by auto yesterday afternoon for a month's vacation at his home in Raleigh, N. C. After a rest the doctor will probably become a member of the state department of health in his home state.

For the past month he has been engaged in some special work for the Illinois department of health in the cyclone stricken area of southern Illinois. He reports that the country is being cleared up in fine shape and that he believes that section to have a prosperous future in store for it if proper drainage and better agricultural methods are used. The people are in a very receptive mood for good public health work, he said, but added that they needed more education along health lines.

Dr. Mann stated that the state board of health has been doing excellent work in checking threatened epidemics of contagious disease. As bad sanitary conditions were prevalent, typhoid was an ever present danger, but was ward off with vaccinations, 1,000 people voluntarily being vaccinated.

Near West Frankfort smallpox broke out but was checked by the voluntary vaccination of several thousands of the people.

BANCROFT CHOSEN TO BE PLATFORM MANAGER

Name Officers to Act During Chautauqua at Meeting of the Board Last Night.

The main business of the evening was discussion of the program arranged. H. H. Bancroft presented his report as chairman of the program committee, saying that only two or three vacancies were yet to be filled. He said that numerous notable men, among them Charles G. Dawes, Senator Borah and Senator Willis of Ohio, and some Illinois celebrities may be included on the program.

HOBOES PULL AIR AND NEARLY WRECK TRAIN

Two Gentlemen of the Road, riding on the platform of an oil tank in a Wabash freight train, reaching a point about a mile east of Jacksonville Friday morning, decided that it was as far as they wished to ride at that time, so, to make alighting more easy, "pulled the air," in other words, suddenly set the air brakes of the train by turning the anglecock on the tank, causing the train to stop so suddenly that all aboard received a hard jolt, and one drawbar was pulled out, the wagon being that the train was not wrecked as it was moving at a fair speed. The train crew, naturally hotter than even the hot weather was making them, went in search of the foxy free passengers, but these worthless delinquents just about of trouble. The freight train was delayed about an hour and a half at Jacksonville.

ESTABLISH MEMORIAL FOR FRANKLIN ADAMS

An anonymous donor recently sent a check for $100 to Ralph I. Dunlap, treasurer of the alumni fund for the establishment of a memorial membership in that fund for Franklin Adams of the class of 1860. Franklin Adams was a son of Professor Samuel Adams, a member of the original faculty at Illinois college. When President Lincoln issued a call for volunteers, young Adams enlisted, became first lieutenant and later captain and lieutenant colonel of the 23rd Regiment of Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Col. Adams became a civil engineer and was among the engineers who helped to build the Union Pacific railway across the continent. No alumnus of his generation could be more worthy of a memorial in the alumni fund.

Superintendent and Mrs. Irving B. Potter of Dixon, Ill., both of the class of 1911, were visitors at the president's office Friday morning.

Mrs. C. H. Rammelkamp returned from the east Saturday morning. While in the east, Mrs. Rammelkamp attended the twenty-fifth anniversary of her class at Wellesley college, and also visited her brother, Professor Edward Capps at Princeton.

President Rammelkamp's mother and sister at South Orange, N. J. The Washington Post of June 9 contains a cut of Miss Priscilla Capps, '21, who is expecting to leave for Greece where she will take charge of the workshops which have been organized in that country by the American refugees work in these shops, turning out beautiful fancy work which is sold in the United States for the benefit of the refugees.
